What is so engaging that it makes you lose all track of time? Well, for me it's video games, because they are a lot of fun to play. They are very fun to play because there is so much going on that there is never a dull moment while playing any game. There is always a push for something new, more exciting and better. It more fun when you play with your friends because, you have someone to talk to and goof off with. They captivate me because there's always a push for more and better things. My parents say I play them too much and I need to stop playing them so much, games are just addictive and it hard to stop playing when you start.

Who do you turn to when you want to learn more? I turn to my parents or family because they always support me and never let me down. I turn to my my dad because I do the exact same thing as he does like, I love being outside and using tools. I turn to my mom because because she knows a lot about things. She helps me with anything I need at anytime even if she doesnt know whats going on. I turn to my family because they are fun to be around and very understanding if something is wrong.

What would you do if you liked being with your family and playing games? I try to do both because it's hard to not be with your family, they are fun and make me laugh. Gaming for me just a fun thing to do when I get home from school. (283)
